Skunk Neutralizer Directions

First and foremost: DO NOT BATHE THE DOG! or pour tomato juice on it or anything else you have hear of. You will want to do the following quickly as possible for two reasons; the chemistry works best on fresh unoxidized portions of the skunk spray and because you and the dog are suffering from the smell. If the dog has been bathed or rinses, you will notice the immediate cessation of the odor. If the dog has been rinsed it is not as effective. If the skunk spray is fresh it is like magic (but it really just good chemistry).

Supplies:

2-3 quarts of 3% regular hydrogen peroxide

1 box of baking soda

Liquid dish soap

Bowl or bucket

Sponge

Gloves

Water

Take 1 quart of 3% hydrogen peroxide into mixing container. Add $\frac{1}{4}$ cup of baking soda. This will start to bubble and fizz (that is why you cannot premix the solution). Add a teaspoon of dish soap. Wet the dog thoroughly with the solution. Sponge carefully around the face at the stuff really stings the eyes and nose. Make more solution if necessary, the fresher the better. After the dog has been thoroughly wetted and the traces of the smell are gone, rinse the dog with water. Bathe him with water and shampoo to rinse and clean the solution off as if left on can irritate and dry the skin.

How it works:

Skunk spray is comprised of thiols – an organosulfur compound with sulfur-hydrogen bonds. This odor causing molecule is repulsive to humans at 10 parts per billion. These compounds can be readily oxidized into a neutral non odor producing state by adding oxygen molecule to alter the chemical structure of the thiols.

Comments:

- If you cannot keep your dog still enough for the areas around the eyes, skip that area. It will still smell but not the extent of the whole dog covered in spray. There is no reason to get this solution into the dog's eyes.
- Be sure to rinse the solution off. Hydrogen peroxide can have a bleaching potential to coat color but if done quickly and rinsed off completely should not have much effect.
- Be sure to keep some the solution to rinse off your clothes, shoes, skin after wetting the dog and before rinsing things off as you will have skunk on you too.
- Best of all, if you make the kit and are ready to go, the skunks stay away. 12 years of having the kit in the truck hunting – no skunk encounters!
